Peninnah Schram

Peninnah Schram draws deeply from the Jewish oral tradition, sharing folk tales, legends and parables in a graceful captivating style all her own. Founding director of the Jewish Storytelling Center in New York City, her book Jewish Stories One Generation Tells Another is a staple in the libraries of storytellers across the country.

ing director of the Jewish Storytelling Center in New York City, her book Jewish Stories One Generation Tells Another is a staple in the libraries of storytellers across the country.

Janice Del Negro

In stories that range from the lyrical to the macabre, Janice Del Negro's riveting repertoire appeals to listeners of diverse ages and experience and has been applauded from coast to coast. Her award-winning books include a collection of supernatural tales for young adults, an ALA Notable picture book and the indispensable Storytelling: Art and Technique.

Angela Lloyd

A matchmaker of spoken word and music, Angela Lloyd draws on world folktales, oral tradition, original works and the best in children's literature to showcase her delightful style and impeccable timing. Her whimsical braid of poetry, story and song, accompanied by washboard, auto-harp, ukulele and bells, make her a favorite of audiences nationwide.

Tim Couch

Tim Couch's heartfelt and thought-provoking storytelling helps us find answers to the big questions we all have in common. A gentle compassion is evident in his empathy towards the characters in his stories and shows why Tim has been featured in such diverse venues as the State Fair of Texas and the Crow Collection of Asian Art.
